GRATES AND STOVES!

Any Style of Grates can be Set or Reset with this Improvement.

WE ARE NOW PREPARED TO FILL orders rapidly, as we have a large force of good workmen.

Have your grates set with the patent before cold weather, or you will regret it. It is poor economy to use your grates set in the old way, burning twice as much coal as you need, and not obtaining half as much heat as the patent gives. The patent will eave your money by reducing the consumption of fuel. It will save your heatth, by giving you pure heat and plenty of it to make your rooms comfortable in all parts. It makes your home cheerful at a trifling cost, which is soon saved in fuel.

We have now a full supply of the Patent Stoves, plain and enameled.

Orders may be left at No. 20 West Fifth-street, or sent through mail.

BURGLARY ON JOHN-STREET.—The house of a man named Joseph Gould, located on John-street, below Third, was feloniously entered night before last and robbed of twelve dollars in money and some articles of wearing apparel.

RECEIPTS AT THE MAYOR'S OFFICE DURING THE PAST WEEK.—The weekly report of the Mayor's Clerk, Mr. Charles Betts, to the City Auditor, shows receipts to the amount of $1,535 70, during the week ending yesterday, from the following sources:

BOARD OF CITY IMPROVEMENTS .- At the

AN ANTIQUATED JOURNAL .- Mr. Charles H. Kellogg has handed us a copy of the Essex (Mass.) Gazette, bearing date of October 10, 1769—quite a curiosity in its way, and very suggestive of the vast progress our Republic has made in ninety years in newspapers, as well as in everything else. The Gazette is in dimensions about twelve by fifteen inches, and, though no doubt an excellent journal at that remote period, would now be about as in-teresting as a tailor's bill after it had been paid. It contains no editorial, but is made up mostly of Foreign and Boston news, and looks as if it had been brought from the catacombs of Egypt.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT TO THE DRIVER OF A MILK WAGON.—About half past three o'clock yesterday afternoon, Coroner Carey was called upon to hold an inquest upon the body of a man named Henry Heinman, who had been thrown from a milk wagon at the corner of John and Catherine-streets, and was supposed to be killed. The Coroner found the wounded to be killed. The Coroner found the wounded man alive, although insensible, and by his exertions he was enabled to be taken to his home below Millcreek. His injuries consist of a severe cut upon the face and several bruises upon the head, one of which is a frac-ture of the skull, which may yet result fatally. fatally.

MAN'S THIGH BROKEN .- A horse attached on Elm-street, and threw the driver out upon the bowldered payernent, dislocating his thigh and otherwise injuring him quite seriously. He was carried to the Commercial Hospital, where his wounds were attended to and he rendered comfortable as the circumstances would admit. He stated that his name was Louis Shaeffer, and that he had been employed, but a short time since, by a man upon the Reading Road. The dislocation of his thigh will confine him to his bed for a considerable length of time, and from his appearance and statement there are those dependant upon him who can not well afford to lose the support he neretofore has given them.

LEGAL.—The case of John Kain, who, some three years since, killed Singleton, for the atleged seduction of his daughter, was sent to the Penitentiary, and obtained a new trial, has been in progress for several days before the Court of Common Pleas, Judge Collins; and yesterday, Stephen J. McGroarty, a young and rising lawyer, made a forcible and elequent argument to the jury in behalf of his citent, the aged and grief-stricken perent. For one so young in years and legal studies, Mr. McGroarty's effort was, in every respect, able, and reflected great credit upon him. His peroration, in which he contrasted the reception of a Washington Senator, on a somewhat simof a Washington Senator, on a somewhat sim-ilar cocasion, with his unbefriended client, was very effective, and drew tears from many eyes. SCENES OF DESTITUTION.—Lieutenant Brockington, of the Police, and also Overseer of the Poor, in the Thirtsenth Ward, paid a visit to Poor, in the Thirteenth Ward, paid a visit to No. 28 Accommodation-street, yesterday, where he found James Mahor, a youth of fifteen, lying on a miserable pallet of straw, clothed in rags and greatly emaciated by disease. His mother, a dissipated, unfortunate creature, was nearly always intoxicated, and had often refused to give him a cup of water, though he lay there burning up with fever for five long weeks. The poor boy was taken to the Commercial Hospital.

James Watteson, his wife and five children, were discovered yesterday, at No. 43 Eighthstreet, in a most pitable condition. They had been steeped to the lips in poverty, and in addition to this, new misfortune had fallen upon them. The family were properly cared for.

An Old Story Retold-Woman's Wrong and Woman's Woe-Remarkable and Pathetic Letter from a Would-be Sul-

On Thursday of last week a young girl, less than eighteen, arrived in this city from the Northern part of the State and took lodging at a hotel on Broadway, below Third. She remained there a part of the day and left in the evening in company with a young man who paid her bill, stating that he had found for her a permanent boarding-house on Ninth-street.

as she now admits, her destination did not cost her a single thought; for long before she had learned, through some mystic power she could not understand, to place implicit trust in her companion, believing that he was all her heart represented and her fancy had painted him.

After they had arrived at the house which was to be her future home, they were shown into a comfortably furnished room, and she was told that in his absence—for he intended to leave the next morning for Memphis—she would be taken care of by the landlady, who was his friend.

Before the hour for breakfast the young man bade her good-by and left the city, as she believes, for the South. When she had finished her toilet, however, and descended to the dining-room she met strange faces and persons, whose loud conversation and vulgar appearance gave her cause for alarm; and before the day had waned she became aware of the fact that the man whom she loved and trusted had placed her in a barnio and detrusted had placed her in a bagnio and de-

Half insane she remained until Saturday, when she went out and wandered about the city like one forsaken. It seemed to her a Sahara, and she looked in vain for an ossis. No compassionate eye in all her walk met No compassionate eye in all her walk met hers; no face she saw throughout the weary day smiled on her kindly; and for the first time in her life she felt the necessity of pouring from her heart into some sympathetic ear the woe with which it was well-nigh bursting.

On her return, while passing a drug-store, the thought suggested itself, and she determined to die. She went in, and, with the little money still remaining in her purse, she thought to purchase strychnine, but it was refused her. The denial seemed to render her laudanum, and with better success, for the generous apothecary sold her an ounce of the poisonous liquid.

She repaired immediately to her room, telling the landlady of the establishment that she did not decire any supper, and taking her seat at the table, wrote the letter which we publish below. Morning had dawned before it was finished, and, folding it carefully, she left it upon her dressing-bureau, drank the contents of the phial she had purchased the previous evening, and threw herself upon the bed to sleep off life's fitful fever.

When she retired, by some accident, she neglected to look her door, and as she did not appear at the breakfast table, one of the inmates of the house went to her room, and finding it open, entered, only to be startled by what seemed to be the dead form of this muchabused woman. Her brow was cold as if it had already received the kiss of the Destroy-

The girl quickly informed her companions of the circumstance, and they found upon exam-ination that "Dera" was still breathing. A medical friend of ours, from whom we received the story, was called in, who, through the aid of astomach-pump, removed the drug from her system, and by proper exertion scon completely restored her to health.

BOARD OF CITY IMPROVEMENTS.—At the regular semi-weekly session of the Board of City Improvements, held yesterday morning, the bids which had been laid upon the table for repairing the culvert under Culvert-street, south of Fifth-street, were taken up, and the Cilerk was directed to prepare and transmit to the City Council a resolution authorizing B. Kottman to repair the said culvert at the following rates: Culvert, per foot, lineal, $5 84; well-holes and foundations, $2 per perch; excavating, per cubic yard, 49 cents; repairing, per square yard, 30 cents; after which, the Board adjourned.

Yesterday the deserted girl left the city, but whither she went no one can tell. She departed mysteriously as she came, and no trace is left of her here save the letter, evidently written while gazing into her heart with the belief that it would soon cease to throb forever, the memory of the incident which must have left an indelible impression upon the minds of all who witnessed it, and this simple relation of another one of life's tragedies, for such it certainly is, although it has not as yet ended certainly is, although it has not as yet ended with a death.

Her young heart has been crushed; the fountain of her love destroyed, and whatover be her fate in after life nothing remains to her now save the memory of her blighted hopes, and the dream which, like too many others, has been dispelled by the heartlessness of the man who caused its existence, and through whose agency she has been deprived of the brightest jewel in the casket of a woman's life—her chastity.

The following is a copy of her letter, which was written in quite a delicate hand and the was written in quite a delicate hand, and the story, though old, is told with a simplicity which will carry with it the conviction of its truth, and beside this, show that the writer must have had not only intellect but culture: To Asy Who Loves ME—How deeply I have suffered, no one will ever know. I wonder my poor heart did not break long since. Would to God it had; for then I should have been spared days of misery that seemed years of pain!

I have often asked myself why I should be so wretched. What have I done to be so bereft of hope and peace, and that dear consolation, that sweet necessity of woman's life—a reciprocated love!

Indeed, I have been more sinned against than sinning. I strove to be faithful, good and pure; but I could not. O, I have wept and prayed in vain, till my soul ached, and agony dried the tears in which I sought relief.

Perhaps I was guilty in so madly loving him; but te taught me all I knew of love; and I would nover could not. O. I have wept and prayed is vain, till my soul ached, and agony dried the tears in which I sought relief.

Perhaps I was guilty in so madly loving him; but he stught me all I knew of love; and I would never have thought of Heaven if he had not deserted me. It was cruel, very cruel; but I will not blame him! May he be always happy as I have been wretched since he left me.

The thought that I have been compelled to lead this loathsome life has maddened me. Every hour I have breathed the atmosphere of this place I have been as ene already damned. I have striven by wild excitements to forget my woe, but the demon of memory would not depart.

My worst enemy, if I have one, would pity me if he could see my bleeding heart. O, God, how much a woman can bear and live!

I have resolved to live no longer. Nothing can be worso than this; and then, I believe, when I have passed from this scene of agony, I shall be at rest. Why I think so, I know not; but I feel the inward voice does not deceive me.

How little do we know of our fate! What bright prospects were mine in early years. How fair life looked, and how beautiful the world! I was a joyous girl, and all my hours were golden. My young heart was full of lovely dreams; and the future looked like a distant Eden, whose fragrant bowers would soon be reached.

The dream of my life was love; and yet love has proved my ruin; love as pure as ever throbbed through wenan's heart, or made the poet's song.

To well I remember my dear mother and father and my beloved sisters. I left them all for him. They have wept and mourned for me; but they have never known how much cause they had. Thank Heaven the secret is mine.

But I shall fall in my purpose if I recall these pictures of home.

Let me go in peace: I hold the fatal draught, I feel I never shall swake again; never howen.

But I shall fall in my purpose it fraid draught. I tures of home.

Let me go in peace: I hold the fatal draught. I feel I never shall awake again; never know sorrow more. Farewell to life, farewell to all! You who learn my fate, I trust, will forgive me; to you it may seem desperate, but it is natural, and could not be otherwise. I know now it was no ordered from the first.

DORA CREIGHTON. POLICE COURT.-Judge Lowe tried but seventeen cases yesterday morning, but of all these not more than one seemed worthy of a para-graph. They were principally cases of dis-orderly conduct and drunkenness, and were almost wholly without general interest.

A fellow named Thomas Kale was arraigned for stealing a piece of plaid from a dry goods store, No. 196 Fifth-street, kept by a man named Simon Fletcher. He seems to have been an old offender in this way, and offered drunkenness as an excuse for his crime. His previous character, however, arose in evidence against him, and he was sentenced to the County Jail at hard labor for a term of five

Y. M. M. L. Lectures-Rev. H. W. Bellows on the "Criteria of Social Progress,"

Rev. H. W. Bellows's third and last lecture on the "Science of Society," was delivered last evening at Smith & Nixon's Hall, on the "Criteria of Social Progress," to rather a small audience, compared with those of the two previous evenings.

The lecturer set out by defining criminality as the violation of right and the appropriation of others property, and by stating that so many fallacies existed respecting criminality that few knew what it was.

It was common to measure social progress.

many fallacies existed respecting criminality that few know what it was.

It was common to measure social progress by the increase or decrease of crime, which was all wrong, for that was looking at the matter from one point of view only. If crime increased, goodness increased also, and this, the truest and best evidence of social progress, could not easily be detected.

Men did not become better, perhaps, all other things being equal, by large and deep cultivation; but the masses did by a certain degree of wholesome knowledge on subjects within their reach. Popular education was what was needed, not enough to awake and arouse all the faculties, for there was born augmented disposition to err and to defraud.

A little learning was not a dangerous thing, and the people were gradually tending in the right direction. The world was, every year, understanding social progress and how to promote it; and the day was approaching when all would be clear—when false figures and made-up statistics could no longer be committed instead of the highest faculties of the soul.

This crude outline may give some idea of the Doctor's discourse, which was less interest-ing than its predecessors, but which had evi-dently been closely reflected upon and care-fully worded.

THE TURNER'S FAIR.—The fair for the bene-fit of the Turner's now hall, on Walnut-street, fit of the Turner's new hall, on Walnut-street, between Allison and Liberty, still continues with seemingly unabated interest, and is attended nightly by a large number of persons of both sexes, who enjoy it, apparently, as much'as if it were altogether new. The males do not long resist the inducements which are offered by their sweet-eyed friends to take chances in the goods they seek to dispose of in this manner, and the leve-notes that pass through the lily-like bands of the delicate girl that has charge of the Postoffice are calculated to cause more heart-throbs than the approving smiles of the fair writers will the approving smiles of the fair writers will ever be able to compensate.

In company with a number of our brother journalists we visited the hall for the first time last evening. It is large and commodious, and admirably adapted to all its uses. The gymnasium is arranged in excellent style; the upper hall is well proportioned, and the stage and decorations are gotten up in an elegant manner. In all its appointments the new hall seems to be all that could be desired, and under the control of Mr. Jacobi and the President of the Association will doubtless be rendent of the Association will doubtless be ren-dered as comfortable and attractive as the most fastidious could desire.

The fair will continue until after the holidays, and it is expected that a sufficient sum will be realized from the sales of the articles on exhibition, to enable this excellent society to finish their building in the manner they

Martin, for some time past connected with the river department of the Enquirer, of this city, died at the residence of his brother-in-law, in Newport, on the night of Monday last. Mr. M. was a large-hearted and generous man, much admired by all who knew him for his quiet and smiable disposition, and his death will be much regretted. His remains will be intered at Spring Grove to-morrow morning. interred at Spring Grove to-morrow morning.

Sale of Forgetted Lands.—Deputy Auditor Bell sold at the Court-house yesterday vari-ous lots and property in the county for un-paid taxes, amounting to $2,772 68.

AMUSEMENTS.

PIKE'S OPERA-HOUSE .- Quite a large and in-

PIRE'S OPERA-HOUSE.—Quite a large and intellectual audience was drawn to the Opera-house last night, to wincess Mr. Mundoch's rendering of one of Shakspeare's greatest creations—Machern Like everything which Mr. M. undertakes, it was chaste and elegant, and in every part was admirably conceived and excellently enacted.

The miss-en-scene was superb, reflecting the greatest credit upon both the artist and manager, and in oplace in the country, we are satisfied, is this department of theatrical representation better executed. It is, indeed, a pleasure to witness a play at this elegant establishment, for, in all its appointments and properties, it is gotten up in a style rarely equaled on this side of the Atlantic.

To-night will be presented Bulwer's admirable comedy of Morary, Mr. Murdoch appearing as "Alfred Swelyn" and Mrs. Conway as "Clara Douglass." In the hands of these excellent artists these characters will be faithfully translated, while we doubt not Mr. Davidge, as "Graves," will lament his "Sainta Maris" in a manner that will keep the sudience in a roar. All who desire to see this play admirably enacted should not fail to witness it at the Opera-house this evening.

Wood's Theater.—The second audience of Opera-house this evening.

Wood's Theater.—The second audience of Maggie Mitchell was in every respect equal to the first, and her impersonations gave general satisfaction. We do not admire the style of drams in which this piquant and pretty blonds has made herself so famous; but are not surprised that the naivete and grade with which she renders every character she assumes has made her a favorite. To night she appears as "Mathilde," in the celebrated drams of "The Farner Spr," and as "Milly," in the beautiful comediate of "The Mark with the Milking Pail."

MATIONAL THEATER.—The audience last night at the National was excellent, and Rowe's celebrated, though somewhat neglected, tragedy of Jane Store and Rowe's resident to the National was excellent manner by Mrs. Farren and the "Old Druy" company. The "Lettita Hardy" of Fanny Fitz, in the comedy of The Belle's Strategem, was a fine impersonation, and, although we do not admire the character, we could find but little fault with the impersonation. The affecting tragedy of The Samesters, Mrs. Farren enacting the part of "Mrs. Beverly," and the beautiful comedy of The Little Theasure, with Fanny Fitz Farren as "Gertrude," form the attraction for this evening.

CONCERT AT THE NEW JERUSALEM TEMPLE. CONCERT AT THE NEW JERUSALEM TEMPLE.

The concert at the New Jerusalem Temple on Longworth street, between Hace and Elm, to-night, promises to be a fine affair. The excellent pianist and musical prodigy, Sophia Werner, will execute some of her best pieces, while the choir, under the direction of Prof. H. J. Sprith, will discourse most elequent music. The attraction leads us to expect a large audience, and we have no doubt our anticipations will be more than gratified.

Monetary and Commercial.

Money was easier yesterday than on Monday, considerable Currency having been received from the country; but the supply fell far short of the demands the bankers had upon them. Eastern Exchange was more freely offered at par ♠¾ buying and ¼ premium. In Gold and New Orleans exchange there was no alteration in rate. and both were dull.

LAW REPORT.

BEFORE JUDGE STORER.—J. Clark vs. J. Classidy. An action of replevin for personal property. Verdict for plaintiff—one cent damages.

G. M. Lee and others vs. J. Wintermente. Judgment for $5238.

Before Judge Spencen.—Platt & Platt vs. Wm. Grandin. To recover $500, as an attorney's fee, claimed by Donn Platt for services rendered in strending to a prosecution gainst defendant for shooting at and wounding a policeman, and connected therewith the adjustment of a claim for damages—the former terminating in a nolle and the latter in a compromise for $550. The defense claimed that there was no employment of Mr. Platt; that he was the consin of Mr. Grandin, and that his services were voluntary.

COMMON PLEAS. Anderson and Wife vs. the County Commissioners.—A proceeding in which the right of the County Commissioners to open a road in Delhi Township was contested. The plaintiffs claimed the right to impeach the record establishing the road; and also that it was veca ed under an agreement with the Commissioners.

Judge Carter admitted the record as testimony; held that the Commissioners could not, by any contract, change the line of a road, and instructed the jury to find the issue joined for the defendants. Verdict accordingly.

tract, change the line of a road, and instructed the jury to find the issue joined for the defendants. Verdict accordingly.

Tract of John Kain.—On the part of the defense several vituesses (mostly medical) were called to establish a case of insanity.

Drs. Comegys, Sherwood, M. B. Wright, and Muscroft were examined.

Hypothetical cases were put to the witnesses, and the general effect of the testimony was that a man might be so overcome with emotional insanity as to test an irrestatible impulse to do a thing which he knew to be wrong—that he might be driven to insanity secong his daughter entering upon a life of prostitution—that domestic relations were a fruifful source of insanity—that the facts developed in this trial did not prove a technical case of insanity, but the constant pressure on the mind of the emotion described might produce it.

To rebut a portion of the testimony for the defense, the State called rebutting evidence.

T. A. Logan and W. H. Kerr addressed the jury for the prisoner; T. Gaines and W. H. Kerr for the State.

In the matter of the estate of Ethan Stone. Julge Hilton was engaged in this case, which came up on exceptions, to the account rendered by the ex-

COVINGTON NEWS.

Police Court.—There was but one case before the Police Court yesterday, that of Joanna McCarty, a vagrant, who was sent to prison for a term of twenty days.

THE RIVER .- The river, after remaining nearly stationary for several days, is now receding as rapidly as it rose. Numerous flat-bosts, loaded with coal, are passing down the river, having come from Pittaburg since the present high water commenced. OUR CIRCULATION.—The large circulation of the Passa in Covington and Newport renders it an excellent advertising medium for our merchants and others, and they should not fail to avail themselves of it.

Swinz.—We learn that the greater portion of the hogs from the interior of the State has already been taken to market. The arrivals are now very small, and buyers are turning their attentirn in other directions.

IMPROVEMENTS .- A great number of our citiens are making preparations for building houses nd otherwise improving their property next Spring . VALUABLE STOCK. — Three shares in the Northern Bank of Kontucky were recently sold in Philadelphia at $125 each.

BILLIARD MAYOR YESTERDAY. — Tiemen, Royce and others visited the Star Saloon yesterday, according to appointment, for the surpose of playing a match at billiards. Some very good rune were made by the different players, but none that could be deemed first class. Our citizens took considerable interest in the affair, a large crowd of whom were in attendance.

work has been suspended on the new jail. It will be esumed, however, as soon as possible.
